Film – Town Settlement

This APM, we are delighted to delve back in to the British Film Institute's (BFI) archive and offer you a unique viewing of an attractively-shot, 1934 Gaumont-British educational film featuring a sun-kissed Saxmundham. With the help of some curious animated models, we learn why our town's Viking founders chose to settle here. You'll also get a fascinating introduction to the local crop and livestock farming of the time with horse-drawn ploughs and laboriously hand-cut sugar beet. Life in 1930s Saxmundham may have changed less since the time of the Domesday Book than it has since this film was made...

Town Settlement was the first in a film series titled Economic Geography, released by Gaumont-British, which dominated the vital educational films market in the 1930s with its skilfully-made documentaries.
